Need Some Help

Pocket guide for study-related issues

Above all, studying means to gain new experiences, to meet new people and to make new friends. But it also stands for getting a certain degree of freedom and independence and hopefully also the possibility to do whatever you like.

However, studying can also mean to have difficulty coping with the unfamiliar, to move for the first time to a foreign location and to experience emotions of loneliness, pressure and excessive demand, which can even lead to doubts about the chosen study programme.

To experience pleasure, joy and confidence is as normal as being exposed to feelings such as nervousness, fear, doubt and overload. It only gets critical if such feelings have a negative effect on the chosen career path.

To help in such situations, this folder provides you with relevant contacts and information.
